Brake Fluid Exchange

- Evacuation of contaminated fluid
- Replenish system with fresh brake fluid

Brake Fluid is "hygroscopic" which means it is designed to take-up and retain moisture. Moisture is caused due to exposure to changes in temperature, thus breaking down the fluid during normal use. Moisture in fluid causes reduction in brake performance and deterioration of brake hydraulic components due to the affects of moisture.

- Combustion chamber gum and varnish deposits are removed from the entire fuel-induction system
- Throttle body plenum and air intake carbon deposits are cleaned from the intake valves

During normal use, fuel injectors, combustion chamber and the induction system will accumulate deposits causing potential decreases in fuel economy, power and increases in hard-starting and tailpipe emissions.
